

Great Skiing, Great Chocolates and a Focus on Health? Vermont, of course!

By Dr. John Saroyan

With a reputation in the United States for being the home of Ben and Jerry's Ice Cream, Senator Bernie Sanders, and a rugged and rural individualist ethos, many Americans are unaware of the systemwide changes that have occurred since the mid-2000's in health care delivery models in our small state of 643,000.

In this Keynote Address I will describe the successful health care transformation that has occurred in Vermont since Blueprint for Health's inception in 2006, including: the pre- and post-Blueprint health care landscape in regards to payments, data management, quality, and health records; the combination of "top-down" payer participation and "bottom-up" provider participation; a description of its cornerstones--the Patient-Centered Medical Homes, Community Health Teams; the introduction of an Accountable Care Organization; and finally, what Switzerland might learn from Vermont about health care transformation.
